FOREWORD

Dear Reader:

While thumbing the pages of this book, imagine yourself traveling along the yellow-brick road through the wondrous land of Oz. Put yourself in Dorothy's place and journey up a similar road — in this case, the road of knowledge — to a Burnham School diploma. First meet the administration of Oz, who direct and guide the way along the perilous route. Then stand with Dorothy and her friends as they watch the freshmen preparing with high aspirations for their long trip. Walk a little further and greet the more-experienced sophomores, who have already covered the first lap of their journey. Visit next with the hopeful juniors who have progressed a good way up the road, and are now in sight of their goal. Cover the last mile of yellow brick and pass with the weary but triumphant seniors through the gates of the Emerald City.

Venture into the heart of the city and observe the vitally important internal activities. Look at the various branches of the government: the Student Council, the House Councils, and the spirited publications, which aid in making Oz a democratic, efficient country. View the social clubs where any one may learn to sing, dance, or act; and, while thoroughly enjoying herself, lighten the difficult journey to knowledge.

Do you hear the clash of wooden sticks or the sound of a bouncing ball, a shrill whistle, followed by frenzied cheering? Then hasten to the gym where the various Oz teams are participating in a vigorous game of hockey or basketball. On other days you may find badminton birdies or a volley ball being hit over a net. If you look through the gym window, you may see a fast game of tennis or a lively squad of cheer leaders. These sports keep the inhabitants of Oz physically fit, and academically keen.

When you have finished reading this book, you will have seen what life in Oz — or Burnham — is like; you will have seen how each person studies, plays, and enjoys herself. The road through Oz does not always lead over sunny, flower-sprinkled hills; sometimes this journey seems to follow gray valleys where brambles and uncertain ground make the going rough. But for those who survive the trip, new vistas are opened. As each inhabitant leaves Oz, she carries away charm, grace, and an introduction to knowledge, the promise of a profitable, enjoyable future.

Sincerely,

The Editor

On her long and perilous journey through Oz, Dorothy had Ozma, the good fairy, as her guardian. Ozma advised her in time of need, and guided her safely to the Emerald City. Here at Burnham, Mrs. Emerson and Mrs. Peters are our good fairies, for Mrs. Emerson's sincere interest in our many problems and Mrs. Peters' capable handling of our academic difficulties have brought us unharmed to the college gates. Burnham girls will always love and honor these two fine women for their help and understanding in our times of need.

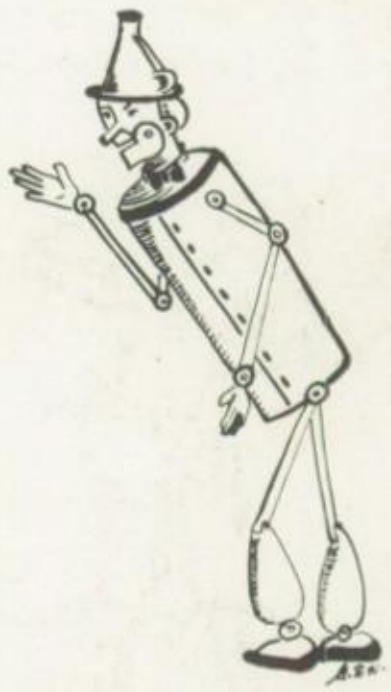
FRESHMEN

The newly-arriving freshmen gazed with awe at the yellow-brick road which lay before them, and anticipated their new adventures. Although the class was only fourteen in number, they ably proceeded down the road with the help of their advisor, Miss Haltiwanger. As soon as they really started, they elected the officers which were to carry them through their first year. Though small in stature, Melinda Geffin received the great honor of class president. Sue Talcott was trusted to keep watch over the treasury; Thelma Hammond was handed the secretary's book in which to jot down notes along the trip, and Peggy-Jo Prince was elected to Student Council. These lively members of the class of '53 could be heard far and wide when it came time to sell food. No sooner was the cry "cup-cakes and ginger-ale" heard than the trample of feet drowned it out, as the starving upper-classmen ran to seek nourishment. For the freshmen, however, the beginning of their journey through Oz was not all play. One glance into the study hall showed them ardently slaving over an algebra or Latin book. These welcome newcomers to Oz furnished much entertainment to their fellow students, but beneath the fun lay the truth that they had learned and the experience they had acquired on the start of their trip along the yellow-brick road.

SOPHOMORES

With the competent assistance of Miss McIver, their class advisor, the twenty-four members of the class of '52 lost no time in proceeding along the yellow-brick road. Harriet Wilson as president, Betty Ellis as secretary, and Sue Ivany as treasurer helped them to make great headway toward their destination, the Emerald City. How can we ever forget the cokes and cookies they sold at recess to sustain us until lunch, or their hilarious basketball game with the faculty? The sophomores offered not only entertainment and food, but they sponsored as well a worthy campaign for the March of Dimes. Before long, the industrious sophomores had assumed the ways of true Burnham girls. Not only had they learned better study habits, but also the quickest way to vanish into their closets to escape their watchful housemothers. A good part of their trip having been completed, they looked forward eagerly to their remaining years.



JUNIORS

The juniors were some of the busiest bees around Oz. While Miss Smith assisted them in holding to their course, the class officers: Joyce Heflin, president, Marianne Lehr, vice-president, and Sally Taylor, secretary-treasurer, led the class full speed ahead toward the Emerald City. The vigorous salesmanship of the class of '51 will never be forgotten with the frequent announcements of "dogs, hats, banners, and Burnham keys for sale in Room 201." These active inhabitants of Oz furnished some of our best athletes and added many victories to our record. Although they spent much of their time learning how to knit argyles and writing letters to football heroes, they studied even harder as they realized the importance of good grades. They took their responsibilities more seriously as they became prominent citizens of Oz. As spring drew near, they were found working industriously making plans for the last big week-end, high-lighted by the Junior Prom. By the end of the year, as they left the last rise in the road behind them, the sight of the gates to the Emerald City served to inspire their goal: the long-awaited senior year.

SENIORS

Once they had passed through the gates, the diligent seniors plunged enthusiastically into their work. On the opening day of school, feeling dignified and sophisticated, they welcomed the timid under-classmen, who were just setting out on their journey. Later, Joyce Prescher was erected as president of the class, with Emily Cooper assisting her as vice-president, Shirley Hamilton as secretary and Margo Vought as treasurer. The class, as the eldest statesmen of Oz, discussed not only the latest beaux, but also the theory of evolution and the atom bomb. They worked hard to overcome the many obstacles which they encountered on the road, and when safely inside the great city, the class of '50 felt great pride and satisfaction. The Honor System, established by the seniors, proved to be one of their greatest accomplishments of the year. In spite of the fact that they were worrying about college, the "Half-Century Ball" will be remembered as one of the most glorious milestones of the entire trip. The seniors, recalling their many significant memories on the yellow-brick road, had only one regret, the possibility of never meeting these companions on the wider road of life. In spite of this fleeting sadness, they were filled with pride as they glanced back over the yellow-brick road.

ORGANIZATIONS

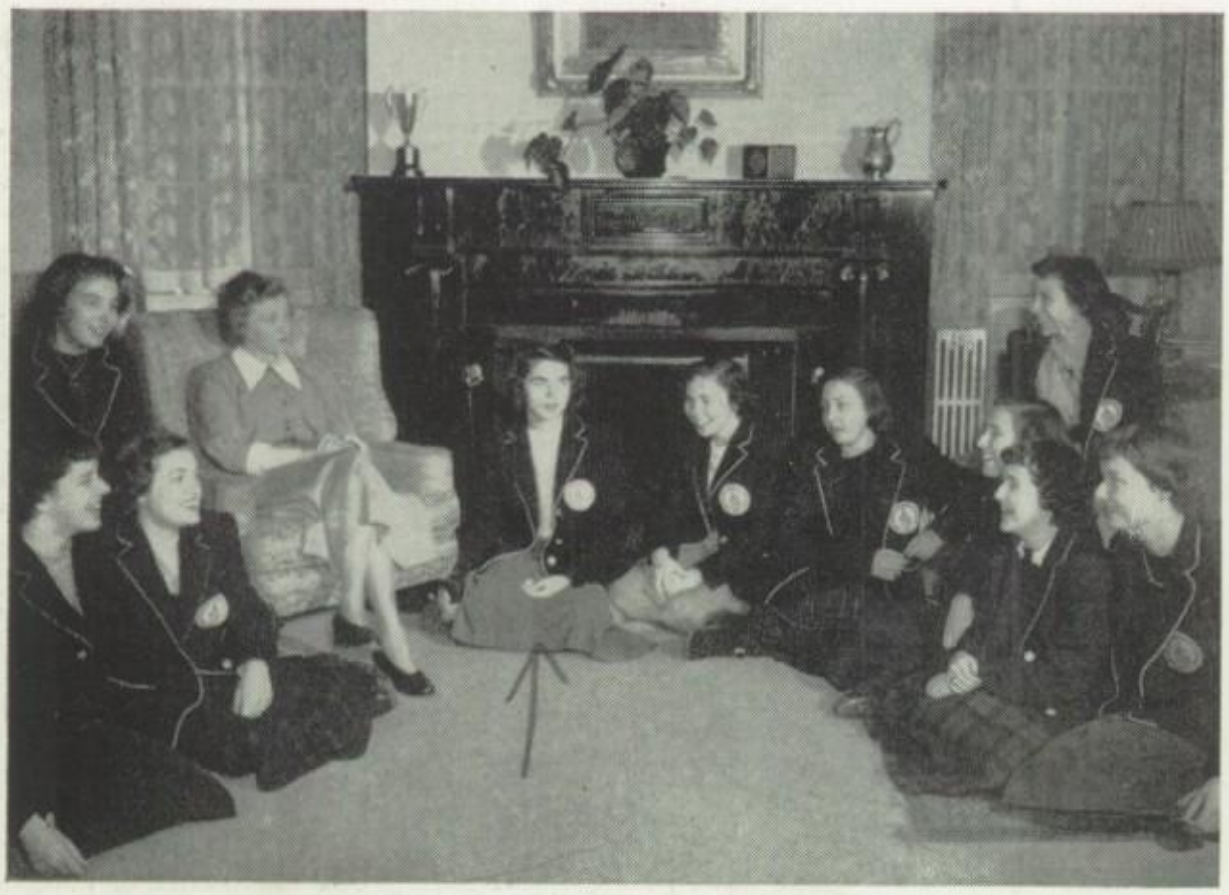
As Dorothy leads us through the gleaming gates into the magnificent City Hall of Emerald City, we see instantly the well-organized life of the colorful land of Oz. The hub of this thriving state is the capable Student Council, whose duty it is to make and enforce the laws of Oz, and to act as a law-court for offenders. Through their efforts, a new and better honor system has been developed at Burnham this year. From the Student Council we proceed to the three House-Councils, which control the activities of their respective houses.

The social life of the state is largely governed by the industrious Pep Squad. This organization is responsible for our Sunday-afternoon teas and, among other things, for the Snow Ball at Christmas time. The Senior Social Committee acts in this same capacity in Southwick House.

In one wing of the City Hall, we come to the Dramatic Club, where we see a bevy of girls — some trying to memorize long speeches, some splashing paints of all shades on scenery, and some working on the bright costumes. This group has presented several entertaining programs during the year. Next door we find the Spanish, or Tertulia, Club. This organization consists of the students studying Spanish and our Spanish-speaking friends. A little farther on, we hear the voices of the Glee Club and Madrigal Club, singing the lovely songs arranged especially for them by their able director. The Madrigal Club, a group of specially-selected girls, sounds exceptionally beautiful.

In the other wing of the Emerald City Hall are located the offices of the state's two leading publications. The office of the bi-monthly newspaper, "Emburette," is filled with editors, feature writers, and reporters, conscientiously "batting out" the copy which makes our paper so informative and amusing. Last, but not least, there is the "Embur" office, where the staff is valiantly trying to meet its formidable deadline.

In this large, shining City Hall is housed the "life" of Oz's existence. Won't you come with us and be introduced to the people that direct this fabulous state?



Student Council Members, Jan Thompson, Carol Leeke, Nancy Gadhue, Priscilla Rice, Mary Dora Hough, President, Greta Miller, Peggy-Jo Prince, Hannah Rutter, Mary Kay Johnson, Lucy Mulholland discuss the progress of the honor system.

The House-mothers, Mrs. Scudder, and Mrs. Waterhouse standing behind Mrs. Fay and Mrs. Danforth, look at the sign-out book.

The Literary Staff of the yearbook glances over some first drafts with the literary editors: Janet Thomson, Sally Carlson, Mary Clymer, editor-in-chief; Shirley Hamilton, Leah Vaughan, and Lucie Mulholland.

The Business Staff of the Embur consult Joyce Prescher, business manager, and her assistant, Greta Miller, about some troublesome financial problems.

The Spanish Club, better known as the Tertulia, gather around Mary Dora Hough, president, and Doreen Donnelly, secretary, to discuss Spanish customs.

The Glee Club, led by President Dolores Dahlinger, practice "Stabat Mater" for their spring concert under the direction of Mr. Victor Prahl.

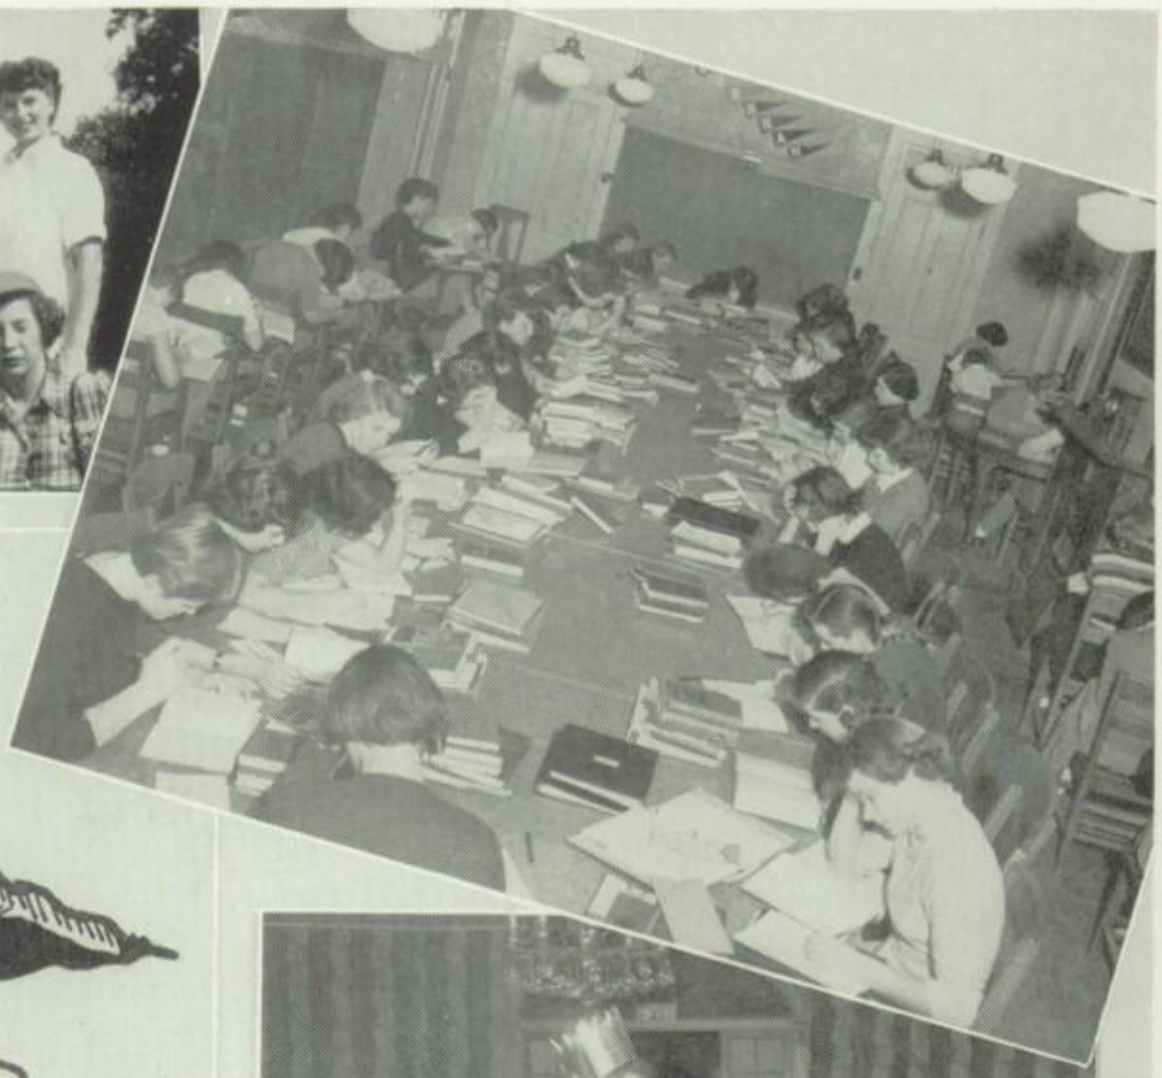
The Dramatic Club study expressions from Lonna Wylie's demonstrations.

The Speakers toast absent president, Janet Adaskin, while the Writers discuss the essential points of good writing.



DANGER

SPORTS

As we journey still farther through this wondrous land of Oz, we encounter the various sports classes, busily engaged in throwing balls, wielding sticks, or executing a jack-knife. The girls are uniformly dressed in bright gymsuits, the exact color of the yellow-brick road outside. Here we see Mrs. Danforth, the Sports Director, and there the Smith graduates who act as instructors. The efficient Athletic Council is the center of our whole sports program.

The Athletic Council arranges the numerous sports activities. The Horse Show, in the fall, is an annual event. Ribbons are awarded in three classes: pair riding, bareback riding, and horsemanship. The Ski Week-end comes in February, when the girls spend a few invigorating days in Vermont. An Aqua Show, late in May, features beautiful exhibitions of swimming, diving, and formation swimming. Throughout the year, the Athletic Council arranges soccer, hockey, and basketball games not only between house teams but also with Stoneleigh-Prospect School and Northampton School for Girls. At these games, our peppy cheerleaders keep up our morale. At the end of the year, the Council holds an assembly at which recognition is given to those girls who have made outstanding sports records. Let us follow Dorothy and her friends as they explore this new part of Oz.

THE ATHLETIC COUNCIL

Sally Taylor

Sally Wulf, Alice Hite
Carol O'Brien

Joyce Heflin

The Soccer team, hoping for another victory, with the help of Captain Mary Clymer, listens intently to the instructor's advice.

The Hockey team takes time out from practice to pose with its captain, Anne Keffer.

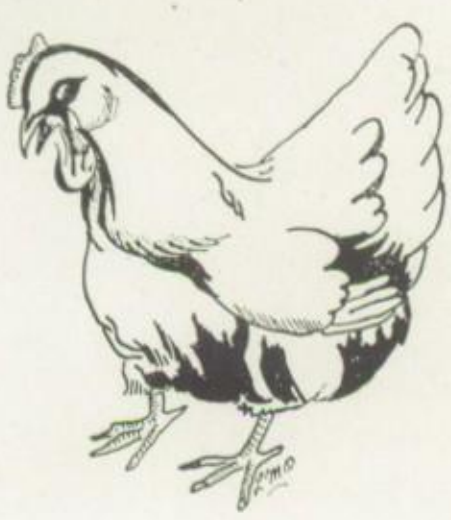
. . . while Janet Thomson, Barbara Snider, and Cookie Storer prepare to accompany the basketball team.



Burnham's Soccer and Hockey teams prove to be stiff competition for the opposition.
